Prescott, Ariz., Sept. 17.—The fight for the nomination as delegate to congress has occupied the attention of the giants for several days, and even for months. The northern section pitted itself against Mark Smith and the southern portion of Arizona. There were only three men in the field—Smith, Wilson and Ellinwood—all true democrats and irreproachable gentlemen, who went before the convention solely upon their merits. Smith had a strong following and could easily have claimed the nomination had he felt so disposed, but owing to pressing matters in his profession he could not accede to the demands of his friends and so left the field to Wilson and Ellinwood. The fight waxed warm between the two gladiators, each contending valiantly for his own when, upon the fourteenth ballot, Colonel Wilson was declared the choice of the people. The nomination gives general satisfaction hereabout and is heartily endorsed by a numerous throng from all portions of the Territory. Colonel Wilson comes before the people without a blemish, is a lawyer above reproach, a gentleman without question, a democrat of the old school, and being a man of integrity will surely lead the democratic host to victory in November next. Jones, of Graham, was mentioned favorably, and while he is popular, the convention was ready to submerge the bloody shirt when he withdrew from the arena. With the democratic party the sword is sheathed, and he who attempts to ride into prominence at the expense of those who fell before Santiago will receive a rebuke which will cause stay-at-home politicians to wish they were not.

The nomination of Colonel Wilson meets the hearty approval of the leading citizens of the territory, among those present being the most prominent mining and business men of Arizona, including among them republicans, populists and those who are looking out for the best man, regardless of parties.

Leading republicans this afternoon assert it as their opinion that the republicans will endorse Colonel Wilson, but this is not believed by the rank and file of the g. o. p., as they will put some one up to be slaughtered in order to maintain party organization. However, the best people of the territory will cut loose from party affiliations and send to congress a man upon whom all can depend, one who will prove himself an able representative and add to the laurels justly due the party that puts him to the front.

There was never a greater unanimity of sentiment regarding one who came up for public favor, and even the administration concedes that Colonel J. F. Wilson will be the next delegate to congress.
